

One and Done Basketball Playoffs - Top 7 Reasons to Play

By Len

The NBA playoffs is the greatest time of the year. After a grueling long season, finally we get 2 months of intense basketball. However, your fantasy basketball season has ended or your favorite team may stink and not be in the playoffs. What are you to do, twiddle your thumbs?

No! You need to sign up and play One and Done Basketball Playoffs! Fun and exciting to play for fantasy hoops guys or casual basketball fans looking for a way to make these playoffs even more interesting.

Chances are you probably never heard about or played One and Done Basketball Playoffs before. So why should you sign up? Here are the top 7 reasons:

1. Simple Rules

- Each round of the playoffs is a round in the One and Done fantasy game
- Choose your own lineup of any 6 players from among all actual players on the playoffs teams in the 1st round, 6 players in the 2nd round, 4 in the 3rd round, and 3 in the 4th round
- Once a player is used for a round, you may not choose him again in the playoffs
- Get fantasy points based on player's in-game production and the team with the most total fantasy points at the end of the Championship wins

2. You choose actual players for your team each round.

This means you need to do true research to know who the top scorers are on each team. Before you stop and say "well, I don't follow the NBA that closely and can't name every player," don't! Do you know every QB, RB, and WR before your fantasy football draft? No, you do a little research beforehand.

FSMFantasySports.com makes this easy for you by calculating regular season fantasy stats for every team and every player. This is found under the top navigational ball under Basketball and Stats. Once the playoff teams are official, we will also provide a one page cheat sheet of all top players on every team for you. The latest news and injuries are found under the top navigational bar also.

3. You'll want to watch every minute of every game

Since you have actual players on your roster, every point scored, rebound, and assist matters throughout the whole game, not just the last two minutes to see what team wins. Trust me, you'll be excited every time your man touches the ball in hopes he puts up fantasy points for you.

4. You are never out of contention to win

In One and Done Basketball Playoffs, you choose your own roster each round of the playoffs. Therefore if a #1 seed loses, you just select players from the teams that are still alive. You're never too far behind in the standings as a unique combination of players in your roster can put up big points and help you climb back to the top.

5. The ultimate game of strategy

This game is for the true fantasy sports fan who likes to make key decisions like when do you use a top player on a high seeded team like Durant and Lebron. Should you hold off on using them till the championship game assuming they get that far or in an earlier round to be guaranteed big point from them?

Another big factor in your player decision is how many games their team may play in the series. The 1st round is a best of 5 series and the rest are best of 7. Since you get fantasy points from a player for a whole round, if a player plays in 7 games, then the player has a better chance of putting up big fantasy stats instead of in a 4 game sweep series.

You must also make sure that you have star players available to choose from in the Final championship 4th round as you are certain to lose by having a scrub bench player in your lineup since you have no one else to choose from. The options and decisions are endless.

6. Prizes to win

Play for free in the FSM Challenge league and you could win $20! There will be hundreds of folks in the league so if you want to improve your odds, play in the FSM Challenge $20 entry fee league to win $200 with the league capped at 12 teams

7. The office secretary could never win this league

This is a fantasy game for those that are familiar with the NBA and enjoy a fantasy challenge, not for someone to pick names out a hat. She may have won your March Madness bracket pool but could never survive here!

Tell all your friends, sign up today, and enjoy playing One and Done NBA Playoffs!
